RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION.

THE DAILY BULLETIN will be delivered to any part of the city at 6 cents a week, or one year for $3.

THE DAILY BULLETIN to any postoffice in the United States, postage prepaid, at twenty-five cents per month or three dollars per year.

THURSDAY EVEN'G, NOV., 24, 1887.

EX-SHERIFF W. N. SMOOT, of Owingsville, has been appointed as one of the Board of Directors of the Paris, Georgetown and Frankfort Railroad to represent the $150,000 stock recently subscribed by Bath County.

The approaching contest for the city offices at Lexington promises to be "red-hot." Nearly thirty candidates are already announced for the different positions. The nominees will be selected December 14th.

"There is gold in Central and Eastern Kentucky," said a conservative citizen yesterday. "Professor Newberry, who was the great authority of the New York Mining Board, told me that he had assayed specimens from Central Kentucky yielding from $5 to $500 a ton—Louisville Courier-Journal.

It's an ill wind indeed that blows no one any good. The recent burning of the Cincinnati Southern Railroad shops was a severe blow to Ludlow, Ky., but Lexington, Chattanooga or some other place will probably put up finer buildings for the company than the ones burned, and donate a good bonus to boot, in order to secure the shops. Ludlow's misfortune will result in good to the company.

The official count in Ohio for Governor shows that Foraker (Republican), received 356,937 votes; Powell (Democrat), 333,205; Seitz (Labor), 24,712; Sharp (Prohibition), 29,700, making Governor Foraker's plurality 29,732. Although Foraker beats Powell 23,732 votes, and will be the Governor of Ohio for the next four years, yet he lacks over 30,000 of having a majority of the votes cast. In other words over 30,000 more people voted against him than for him.

GOVERNOR BUCKNER is to be congratulated upon the excellent manner in which he is disposing of the numerous petitions for pardons and remission of fines. At the last April term of the Woodford Circuit Court S. J. Greenbaum was fined $1,500 "for suffering still slops and offal from his distillery and cattle pens to run into a branch near by." Of course, the Governor has been petitioned to remit the fine, but he disposed of the matter in the following:

"The papers show that the case was appealed by the defendant, and is now pending on his motion in the Court of Appeals. Under the circumstances I deem it improper for me to interfere with the legal proceedings. The courts were established for the investigation of such questions. This case is now before the highest tribunal for decision, and no facts have been adduced to justify executive action at this time."

Those shrewd real-estate men of St. Paul were badly mistaken in their man when they presented Grover Cleveland with a corner lot for the purpose of booming the adjoining property. The following explains the way he treated the gift: "I send you with this a quit-claim deed, executed by Mrs. Cleveland and myself to you and other parties who were grantors in a deed to me of premises in Cleveland Park, near the city of St. Paul. The object of the deed enclosed is to convey the property described therein to the parties who, with the kindest intentions transferred it to me as a gift. I don't know why this land should be given to me, and if it is of value I think that those who by their enterprise have laid out the park should have the benefit of it. I am much pleased by the kindly feeling which prompted the conveyance to me, and to assure you that the pleasure thus afforded is equal to that which I should experience by the retention of the lot which I received."

Yours, very truly,

GROVER CLEVELAND.

One thing can be said of Cleveland that can not be said of all his predecessors at the White House, and that is, he is no gift-taker.

"The Blood is the Life."

Thoroughly cleanse the blood, which is the fountain of health, by using Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and good digestion, a fair skin, buoyant spirits, vital strength, and soundness of constitution will be established.

Golden Medical Discovery cures all humors, from the common pimple, blotch, or eruption, to the worst Scrofula, or blood-poison. Especially has it proven its efficacy in curing Salt-rheum or Tetter, Fever-sores, Hip-joint Disease, Scrofulous Sores and Swellings, Enlarged Glands, and Eating Ulcers.

Golden Medical Discovery cures Consumption (which is Scrofula of the Lungs), by its wonderful blood-purifying, invigorating, and nutritive properties. For Weak Lungs, "spitting of Blood," Shortness of Breath, Bronchitis, Severe Coughs, Asthma, and kindred affections, it is a sovereign remedy. It promptly cures the severest Coughs.

For Torpid Liver, Biliaryness, or Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, and Indigestion, it is an unequalled remedy. Sold by druggists.

QUEER DISHES FOR PEOPLE WHO ARE GASTRONOMICALLY INCLINED.

A Delicious Roast of Wild Cat—The Excellence of Horseflesh—Beetle Paste and Pickled Grasshoppers—Locusts on Toast. A Florida Dainty.

It has often been said that the man who first ate a raw oyster must have been not only brave, but hungry, and although there are few of us who have been equally brave in testing new dishes, we think it safe to say that there are many more who would have been very hungry before eating broiled rattlesnake or baked buzzard, and yet those who have eaten broiled snake declare it to be, when properly cooked, excellent eating.

A few winters ago, in Florida, I was invited to a feast in the wilderness, and ate heartily of a delicious roast of meat; on asking for a second plate I inquired what it was, and was told that it was roast wild cat. Not for the whole state of Florida could I have eaten another mouthful, and yet my vis-a-vis exclaimed, "Wild cat—it is delicious!" How could he! I thought. Of course I was glad afterward that I had tasted wild cat, but I could not have felt any more uncomfortable for a while if they had told me that I had eaten part of the alligator I had seen brought in from the swamp that morning, or a pie made of the beautiful little chameleons that were to be found everywhere; and in fact I am not quite sure but that some of the tough black steaks that we had at the St. Augustine and Jacksonville hotels were not alligator steaks. However, every one to his taste; the Chinaman will tell you that mice are "very good eating," the Frenchman that horse flesh "is excellent," the negro that possum and coon "are delicious," the cannibal that nothing equals the flesh of his enemy, and so on.

PREPARING FROGS' LEGS.

Although frog spearing became a fashionable sport across the water last summer, and was practiced both by men and women, we hardly think that even hazel wood cross-bows and silken cords will induce American girls to follow their French cousins in this rather questionable amusement, still, as there are recipes to be found for the serving of frogs' legs in some of the new cook books, it proves that it is not an unknown dish nor an unliked one, and for the benefit of those who affect something odd for the table the following suggestions for dishes and dinners are offered.

There are several ways of preparing frogs' legs, the simplest being a salad; fried, with sauce tartare; patties of frogs' legs; and a plain fry. For the last, which is the simplest of all, skin and boil for five minutes in salted water, then throw into cold water and drain; roll in cracker crumbs, and fry in hot fat.

Those who visit Florida in the winter can indulge in palmetto cabbage, which is the tender bud of the tree and prepared just as you would boil cabbage, not forgetting to change the water at least twice. It also makes an excellent pickle.

We have heard it stated by those who have tried it that watermelon is vastly improved by pouring brandy or champagne over it. Some time since The London Standard published two recipes which we think will serve as extreme examples in taste. They were for beetle paste and pickled grasshoppers; the latter is a New Zealand dish, but is none the less recommended. The beetles which are used are the common black ones. They should be soaked in vinegar for six hours, then dried in the sun for two hours; the outer shell can then be easily removed, leaving the flesh, which resembles a shrimp. Now mix with flour, butter, pepper and salt into thick paste, and set in a cool oven for two hours. When cold serve with bread and butter. The grasshoppers should be steeped in salt or pork brine for two hours, then boiled in the brine for twenty minutes, then rinsed in lukewarm water, and remove the heads, legs and wings (if any are left). They are now ready for the table, and should be eaten with crackers.

A CHINESE DISH.

A Chinese student tells us that locusts on toast is as fashionable a dish in northern China as quail on toast is in America, and we see no reason to doubt his assertion that they are delicious eating. To prepare them the locusts are thrown into a hot dry pot and covered. When they are dead a handful of salt is thrown in, and they are stirred until crisp; then serve on toast. They are said to resemble a salt herring in taste.

One of the dainties of a Florida seaside hotel last winter was Frenched conch, and many a guest ate it and enjoyed it without knowing exactly what it was. It is the fish whose beautiful pink shells are made so much of in Florida, and it is good eating when properly cooked. It is usually fried in batter, or made into soup.

An odd way of entertaining is to serve national dinners, such as a Swedish dinner, at which every dish has been prepared in Swedish fashion. One very important feature might be the use of black bread, which can only be obtained from a Swedish baker. Another Swedish dish is an omelet made with grated cheese, butter and milk, and cooked in the dish in which it is served. A Scotch dinner consists of kail soup, kippered salmon, haggis, gribet pie, oatcake, barley scones, and gullie cauld water.—Harper's Bazar.

An Opera Manager's Ruse.

A French opera manager was in despair at the prospect of having to produce "L'Africaine" with white negroes in the ballet, because the dancers refused to black their faces for fear it would injure their complexions. He issued an order, however, that all the young and pretty girls must color their faces, because it would do them no harm, while the old and plain ones would be allowed to appear without black faces, because they had more need to take care of their looks. The result was that every blessed one of the girls tried to get on more black than any of the others, and when the ballet was on the stage a half dozen extra caissons had to be used to keep the audience from thinking the lights had all gone out.—New York Sun.

Interesting Indian Relics.

Professor Nicholson, of the State University of Lincoln, Neb., has been presented with interesting Indian relics taken from the grave of an old warrior at Louisville, in Cass county. The brave was buried in a sitting posture with his face to the east, and was well supplied with jewelry. The professor's share of this finery is a ring and a bracelet. Both are of pounded brass. The ring bears a rudely carved letter M on the seal. The intrinsic value of the metal is not large, but the jewelry is not for sale at any price.—Chicago News.

PROHIBITION IN GEORGIA.

The Great Interest Taken in the Coming Election in That State.

ATLANTA, Ga., Nov. 24.—The election in this city on the question of adopting for another two years the law prohibiting the sale of liquor will take place on Saturday, when over 11,000 votes will be cast. The campaign, as it now stands, is singular and deplorable. There is a total suspension of business, and merchants as well as employees stand in groups on the street corners, wildly gesticulating over the merits of the question. Nearly every business firm in the city is about evenly divided. The women are thoroughly stirred up, and walk the streets with blue badges on their breasts.

In fact the women are the center of the fight, having declared their purpose of having lunch stands at the different polls, where white ladies will wait upon negro men who will vote the Prohibition ticket. The old people shake their heads at this innovation, but a prominent colored man says of it: "I see in it the greatest danger. White ladies are inviting this familiarity, and yet if one of our young men, emboldened by this invitation, should speak to one of them the next day, he would stand a mighty good chance of getting lynched."

Death of a Kentucky Fresher.

PARIS, Ky., Nov. 24.—Last evening as Rev. J. R. James, of this city, was going to Millersburg in a buggy, his horse scared and he jumped out and ruptured a blood vessel, from which he died in two hours. Mr. James leaves a young wife, not yet twenty, and two small children. He was pastor of the Baptist church in this city and had been here less than a month.

Strikers Resort to Arms.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 24.—The striking sugar hands at Thibodaux, La., about 5 o'clock this morning fired upon the white pickets who were guarding the place. The white men returned the fire and a brisk battle ensued, in which twenty-five negroes are said to have been killed and two white men wounded. Additional troops will probably be sent to the scene at once.

Preferred Death to Dishonor.

NEW YORK, Nov. 24.—Two young women, Lillie Brinkard and Polly Whyte, made an unsuccessful attempt at suicide yesterday by taking sugar of lead. They claimed to be destitute and starving, not having eaten for ten days. It appears that a proposition had been made to them to go to Bermuda, to lead a life of shame.

Train Will Return to New York.

OMAHA, Neb., Nov. 24.—George P. Bomes, of this city, received a dispatch from George Francis Train, saying that he was still lingering on the frontier because he felt his daughter Sue, and the birds and children of Madison square pulling him back, and he expects shortly to return to New York.

Chicago's Gas Trust on Top.

CHICAGO, Nov. 24.—The great gas trust which lately bought a controlling interest in all the gas companies of the city is credited by a morning paper with having bought off the latest opponents who were fighting the trust in the courts. The plaintiff was the Hoffman estate of New York city, which owned 400 shares of the stock in the Chicago Gas Light and Coke company.

Singular Damage Suit.

LAURENS, Nov. 2.—An unusual action at law began here yesterday. Some time since John D. Sheehan killed Rufus Bishop, and at the next term of the court was acquitted. Yesterday the executors of the state of Bishop filed a suit against Sheehan for $30,000 for the killing, and an attachment was issued against Sheehan's property.

Duties of the Presiding Officer.

The gavel is mightier than the tongue. When you are in the chair never argue with the man on the floor. Speak to him if you wish, but never talk with him. If he is angry or noisy, say nothing, but thump him down. Grasp the gavel firmly in your right hand, with the fingers encircling the handle and the thumb over them, as you would a tennis racket or a battle ax. It is your instrument. You exercise your power through it, and if you don't wield it properly your power is gone. The scepter passes to the loudest talker on the floor.

Do not be afraid to thump. When you set out to use the gavel, use it. Strike with it as you would with a hatchet chopping wood where your fingers were not in danger. Smile on the block with decision. I can tell a man's character and his force of will by the way he wields a gavel. If you only tap with it the House is annoyed and they become disorderly.

When you thump make that the paramount thing in the chamber. Let the notes of the gavel sound loud above anything else. When a member finds out that the gavel talks louder than he does he will keep quiet, and in time the assembly will recognize that the speaker rules. That is what you want.

Always have peace. Never quarrel. Never landy words. Never argue. Keep quiet yourself. Let the gavel do the talking. Again let me say, the gavel is mightier than the tongue.—Speaker James William Husted's Address.

Elephant in the Pantry.

An elephant belonging to a traveling circus broke out of the stables at Rugby, Eng., and bursting open the door of a small cottage adjoining, squeezed in, unfettered the cupboard and dined on a dozen pots of jam, a gallon of pickled onions, a supply of damsons, a joint of meat, a loaf of bread, a pound of butter and a quantity of sweets. It took nearly two hours to get the animal out.—New York Sun.
